

British Education arrives in Frankfurt thanks to King's Group

Students in Frankfurt can now benefit from the prestige and rigour of the English National Curriculum, as the acclaimed King's Group opens a new school in the city

With almost 50 years of experience in educating students across the globe, the prestigious King's Group has opened its latest school in Frankfurt this past August. King's College Frankfurt has become the first school to offer the English National Curriculum in the city, with up to 600 places available.

A leading light in international British education, King's Group has 10 schools across the world – in Spain, UK, Latvia and Panama – and each year has been responsible for educating more than 4,400 international students.

King's College Frankfurt is located in Friedrichsdorf, around 12 miles from the city centre. Offering a British education in an international setting, King's College Frankfurt's teachers are native British and British-trained, and students are able to participate in subjects including sport, music, art and science. Facilities at the school include an outdoor playground area, a sports field, science laboratories, a music room and a library.

The school will grow organically from its opening this academic year, initially offering places to children between the ages of two and ten years old. As these pupils progress through the school, each year group will open up, finishing at the age of 18.

Following the English National Curriculum means that students will receive exactly the same programme of learning as if they were studying at one of the best schools in Great Britain, eventually taking IGCSE and A level examinations. This will open doors to some of the best universities in the world, from Cambridge and Oxford to Berkeley and Georgetown, all of which King's College schools have sent students to.

Outside the classroom, the academic offering is just as strong, with King's College pupils encouraged to participate in an array of extra-curricular activities and to understand, appreciate and contribute to British values, including 'honesty, faith and courage' – the same values that feature on the King's College crest.

King's College Group was founded by Sir Roger Fry, who was knighted in 2012 for promoting British education internationally. Thanks to the success of the institution and the excellent academic results achieved each year by its students, King's Group has become one of the most important and prestigious international educational institutions in the world and "Private Education Group of the Year" at the Education Investors Awards.

The main goals of the Group are to provide students with a rigorous, broad and comprehensive quality British education and to live the Group's Vision "to be at the forefront of British education internationally."

"It has long been an objective of our group to establish a quality British school in Germany and we cannot think of a better place to begin than Frankfurt", said Nicholas Fry, vice chairman of the group. |
